The Women Protection Cell was established to handle workplace sexual harassment allegations. The cell improves awareness of women's issues and creates a safe environment for them on college campuses. Seminars and guest talks are held to discuss all of the current social concerns and how they affect females. The cell is also in charge of investigating complaints about women that are made by employees and students regarding the institution's female grievances. Students can lodge any grievances they may have in the grievance box located in the girls' common room. Any complaint is examined, and the cell takes the proper action right away.

Basic Functions of Cell

- To protect the rights of women and any sorts of violence against them.
- To effectively address workplace sexual harassment complaints, assure confidentiality, and assure non-retaliation.
